Organ Question Divides.

Decatur, Ala., February 7.—The members of the Christian church here have divided on the question of whether or not they should have an organ in the church. Some members favored an organ while others objected to an organ. The result was that a number of the members withdrew and established another church.

The question of having organs in churches is now being debated by prominent preachers and members of the Christian church. The debate is held every night and lasts for three hours. How long the debates will continue is not known at this time. A stenographer has been employed to take down the speeches each night.

Men are barred from attending trials of women in Los Angeles.

A Few Kind Words.

Our battered old editorial heart is just bubbling over with joy. We knocked off grinding out copy for the printers the other day and took a stroll around town just for exercise. Everywhere we went we found some one who had a good word to say, an expression of good will to offer, and not once did we hear a knock against the town, the people, ourself or the paper. Truly, it is good for any man to live among such a whole-hearted and clean people. We hope we will live to be hundred.—Harrodsburg Herald.

Had to Watch the Game. Milroy, a Rush county town, seven miles south of Rushville, is a great place for marble fans. They hold a tournament each spring and summer. One day recently a storekeeper, who is a marble fan, was standing in an alley by his store watching a closely contested game. An Indianapolis traveling salesman, who had come to see the storekeeper, saw a person enter the man's store. He went to the storekeeper.
"There's a customer in your store," he said.
"Pat, be quiet," said the storekeeper, "he'll go out in a minute." And he never took his eye off the game.—Indianapolis News.

Who-What-?

In every field of human endeavor the man or the product that excels must forever live in the white light of publicity where envy and emulation are constantly at work.

Whether in art, literature, music, science or industry, excellence brings the same rewards and punishment.

Widespread recognition is the reward, and the punishment fierce denial and detraction.

When a man's work becomes a standard for the whole world, it also becomes a target for envious competitors.

The leader is assailed because he is a leader, and the effort to equal him is the proof of his leadership.

Failing to equal him the follower seeks to depreciate and to destroy—but only confirms once more the superiority of that which he wishes to supplant.

There is nothing new in this. It is as old as the world, as old as human passions—envy, fear, greed, ambition and covetousness.

And it avails nothing. The man or the product that has in them the real qualities of leadership remains the leader.

That which is good or great makes itself known no matter how loud the clamor of denial. That which deserves to live—lives.

MUD HOLE

Made a Good Roads Convert of Him.

A funny and peculiar incident is told how a man was changed to a good roads advocate in Harlan county last week.

On the 12th of February they are to vote on a $250,000 road bond issue in Harlan county. W. L. Hensley, a wealthy farmer of that county, was very much opposed to the bond issue, came to town and had several thousand circulars printed, showing the fallacy of the road bond issue and the people of Harlan county were voting a tax upon themselves they never would get rid of. While Mr. Hensley was in town he secured some whiskey and with two of his friends started out on his campaign. Not very far out of Harlan his mule in making a desperate lurch to extract himself from a mud hole belly-deep threw Mr. Hensley off in the mud and before his comrades could rescue him he was almost drowned and chilled to death. Mr. Hensley threw his circulars away and came to town and joined the good roads organization and is at present the leading booster in Harlan county for good roads.—Three States.

$217,000,000 In 1915.

Farm and Fireside quotes Secretary of Agriculture Houston's report as saying that animal diseases caused farmers of the country to lose $217,000,000 last year. Hog cholera, Texas fever and ticks, and tuberculosis are the most serious scourges.

"The 1914 outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease was the most extensive ever known in this country. The delay in controlling it at first was due chiefly to the mild infection, which made the disease hard to recognize."

"The Department of Agriculture disclaims responsibility for the purity of hog-cholera serum even in the Government-inspected plants, on the grounds that supervisory inspection cannot be as efficient as complete control. More effective control of serum manufacture is advised and plans are proposed."

A German View.

The Overseas News agency quotes the Frankfurter Zeitung as commenting on the fact that "the British trawler King Stephen dared not save the wrecked and half-starved crew of the German airship under the pretext that the Germans outnumbered them, while at the same time a few German marines with one lieutenant escorted across the ocean four hundred vigorous, normal men."

"We are at a loss what to say about them," adds the newspaper. "It is said that England highly appreciates the heroes of the Moewe. If the rejoicing over good sportsmanship is genuine, the people across the channel must scorn these fishermen."

STILL USEFUL

Harper—Oh! it wasn't wasted. She hasn't kept any of it out of circulation.

PANTS AND TROUSERS WANTED.

A great lady in France wants 300 pairs of pants. Of course we know that "trousers" is the proper word, but that shorter and uglier word is so neatly rhythmic in association with the name of our great sister republic that we simply couldn't resist. The lady in question is Madame Waddington, author of charming and interesting books; and the trousers so devoutly desired are for convalescent French soldiers. A friend of Madame Waddington's has arranged to take to Paris all the good American trousers offered for the good cause and there is a dim hope that before very long there will be at least a few Frenchmen visible on the streets of Paris attired in nether garments that give the impression of having been made for a human being.—Hartford Courant.

Friends of a Strong America.

If we respect ourselves, and if we appreciate the advantages that we have long entered, we will do unto others as we would wish to have them do to us in like circumstances. Let us, for instance, ask this very simple question: What countries, today, would be glad to see the people of the United States able to protect themselves against any possible attack, and able to enforce peaceful measures in the regions where the United States ought to exercise the leading influence? The people of the following states would undoubtedly like to have the United States very strong and well prepared for the defense of her own territories and for the encouragement of right and justice in the world: Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, China, Canada, the Australian Commonwealth, South African Union, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Cuba, and most of the other Latin American republics, and probably Spain. The countries that we have named do not want anything that they do not already possess, and have no aggressive designs or purposes. Since the people of those countries are well aware that the people of the United States have also no aggressive purposes, they would all feel stronger and safer, in a turbulent world, if the United States had a bigger and stronger navy behind its policies for arbitration and international friendship.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for February.
